MURDER WILL OUT.

THE CUNNINGHAM-BURDELL MURDER—ONE OF THE GUILTY PARTIES CONFESSES HIS CRIME.

The mysterious circumstances attending the murder of Dr. Burdell in New York some nine or ten years since, and the extraordinary incidents connected with the trial of Mrs. Cunningham for that crime, will doubtless be fresh in the recollection of all our readers.

Though the facts then ascertained, let me doubt of the guilt of this unhappy woman, yet the evidence of her responsibility for the diabolical deed, was so far as we are able to recall, then elicited. But a secret of this fearful character seems to be kept. After the lapse of all these years, one of the guilty parties has voluntarily confessed his complicity with the crime. A young man calling himself Charles H. Golden, now lying in jail in Newburyport, on a charge of larceny, made a statement in relation to this hitherto mysterious affair, the substance of which is thus given in the Herald of that city:

When in jail he (Golden) volunteered to Marshall Westcott a full confession of crime, which he had carried the burden of for some long enough, and he was willing to clear up his conscience and to clear up his mind. He said that he was a native of New York, and that he was then living in New York, a dealer in jewelry, and working with Frederick J. Kelly, No. 100 Nassau Street. He became acquainted with Mrs. Cunningham, and from time to time made her presents, often visiting her house at No. 100 Nassau Street, and from time to time making her presents.

THESE Troches are made from a Recipe obtained from Charles Moore, M. D., of Portland, Maine, who has been the highest official in the medical profession of the throat, a property due to their demulcent action, and their power of soothing the inflamed and irritated membrane, and of loosening and softening the phlegm, and of restoring the secretory function upon the firing of the tubes, so that it can be readily reabsorbed.

Many persons are subject to a dryness and tickling in the throat, while attempting speech, which often renders it impossible to utter a word, and which is attended with trouble and prevents taking food on going from a warm room to a cold one.
